Pembroke, Bermuda July 17, 2011 Validus Holdings, Ltd. (NYSE: VR) (Validus or the Company) today announced that it provided the Board of Directors of Transatlantic Holdings, Inc. (NYSE: TRH) (Transatlantic) with supplemental information highlighting the superior nature of its proposal to merge Validus and Transatlantic as compared with the proposed acquisition of Transatlantic by Allied World Assurance Company Holdings, AG (Allied World). A full copy of the presentation can be found on the Company s website located at www.validusholdings.com.

Validus noted that its proposal provides superior upfront value to Transatlantic stockholders, including a 27.1% premium to the June 10, 2011 Transatlantic unaffected share price of $44.01⁽¹⁾ and a 5.8% ($2.86 per Transatlantic share) premium to the implied value of the Allied World

(1) Based on Transatlantic ($44.01) closing price on June 10, 2011 and Validus ($30.81) closing price on July 12, 2011. Under the Validus proposal, Transatlantic stockholders would receive 1.5564 Validus voting common shares in the merger and $8.00 in cash per share pursuant to a one-time special dividend from Transatlantic immediately prior to closing of the merger for each Transatlantic share they own.

transaction.(2) In contrast, the implied value of Allied World's offer is currently at a 5.0% discount to the Transatlantic share price.(2)

The presentation also provided information on the intended operation of the combined company post-transaction and Validus plans to create superior long-term value for the combined company's shareholders following the merger, including the following:

Compelling Post-Combination Business Plan, Driving Long-Term Value

The combination of Validus and Transatlantic will create a unique, global leader in reinsurance—a large, nimble company deploying capital effectively to maximize underwriting profitability and achieve superior growth in book value per share. The combined company will be a recognized leader in multiple classes, emphasizing short-tail lines, while positioned for cycle management.

Through its Validus Re and Talbot subsidiaries, Validus provides Transatlantic with leading positions in Bermuda and at Lloyd's, which are natural extensions of Transatlantic's worldwide reinsurance franchise. In addition Validus provides Transatlantic with an EU passport through its Validus Re Europe Limited subsidiary.

Validus intends that the Validus and Transatlantic brands will continue on in their respective markets after the merger. Validus believes that retaining the Transatlantic brand will preserve the established brand equity to the benefit of shareholders. In addition, Validus will seek to retain the Transatlantic management team, and is willing to consider an increase of its Board size to add representation from Transatlantic.

Significant Potential Combination Synergies

In addition to the aggregate earnings power of a combined Validus/Transatlantic, Validus believes there are significant opportunities to expand earnings and Return on Equity through combination synergies. The Company believes these potential synergies substantially exceed the $80 million cited by Allied World and Transatlantic on their joint June 13, 2011 conference call.

Specifically, Validus expects to realize potential synergies by:

- Eliminating Transatlantic's public company costs;
- Restructuring the legal entity organization such that Transatlantic's non-U.S. subsidiaries are no longer Controlled Foreign Corporations;
- Optimizing the combined company's catastrophe portfolio and harmonizing respective risk appetites; and
- Taking steps to maximize the after-tax returns on the company's combined investment portfolios.

Validus does not expect material employee-based cost savings.

(2) Based on Validus ($28.25), Transatlantic ($51.68) and Allied World ($55.80) closing prices on July 15, 2011. Under the Allied World offer, stockholders of Transatlantic would receive 0.88 Allied World common shares for each Transatlantic share they own.

Validus estimates that the combination of a predominately short-tail business like Validus, where Probable Maximum Loss is the greatest capital constraint, with Transatlantic's large premium and reserve base, results in a better spread of risk and increases the combined company's excess capital by over $500 million based on the Company's internal capital modeling.

Substantial Opportunity to Return Value to Shareholders

Active capital management is a core element of Validus' strategy and has contributed to the premium valuation accorded to the Company. In total, Validus has returned to shareholders $1.55 billion of excess capital since its acquisition of IPC in 2009. This includes share repurchases of $947.2 million through March 31, 2011, representing 26.7% of shares outstanding at inception of the program.

Validus estimates that the combination of Validus and Transatlantic creates $1.1 billion of pre-synergy, pre-catastrophe earnings power, which can be available for expanded share repurchase activity.⁽³⁾ Currently, Validus' share repurchase program has $382.0 million remaining under the December 2010 Board authorization.
