Reasons for Differences from the Outlook

Actual sales for the interim period and the revised outlook for sales for the full fiscal year exceed the outlook previously issued primarily because sales in Europe and other areas have been and are now expected to continue to be stronger than anticipated earlier. In addition actual results and the revised outlook for profitability are above the previously issued outlook because of improvements in the cost to sales ratio owing to expansion of production in Japan and at plants in China. Moreover, the substantial rise in the outlook for non-consolidated ordinary profit and net income is due to a revision of the parent company's policy regarding dividends paid by subsidiaries to the parent company. As a result of this revision, the parent company is scheduled to report approximately 4.2 billion yen in dividends received from subsidiaries.
