Corrects claims made by Gold Fields Executives and Illustrates How Harmony

Can Unlock Greater Value in Gold Fields Assets

While Harmony Delivers, Gold Fields Dithers

Harmony (NYSE: HMY ;JSE: HAR) today took a more aggressive stance behind its offer by issuing an analysis to Gold Fields Limited s (Gold Fields) (NYSE: GFI ;JSE: GFI) shareholders, the press and the public illustrating the sustainable value creation of its offers and correcting the inaccurate claims to the contrary made by Gold Fields executives. Harmony believes that its report demonstrates that the Gold Fields Directors have mismanaged their South African assets and their performance has been sub-standard to Harmony s operations for several years.

If you look beyond all of the lawsuits and other delaying actions by Gold Fields management in their effort to delay their shareholders deciding on our offers, the simple fact is that the combination of Harmony s renowned efficiencies with Gold Fields higher grade ore body would bring value to both our shareholder bases," said Bernard Swanepoel, Harmony's Chief Executive. "We firmly believe that the proposed merger is in the best interest of all stakeholders, and we are committed to ensuring that they all have the opportunity to review the facts of the merger and judge its merit for themselves. What we have been hearing from both sets of shareholders confirms this.

Harmony's report outlines how the proposed Harmony/Gold Fields combination would provide immediate and long-term shareholder value through a sustainable cost savings with a market value of over R17 billion (USD$2.8 billion). Harmony's experience with other acquired mines, including two previously acquired from Gold Fields, suggests that cost savings could well equate to a market value of R23 billion (USD$3.7 billion).

Among the ways that Harmony can unlock greater value in Gold Fields' existing assets, the report cites:

1. More efficient operations

Harmony will introduce a more efficient operating structure to the existing Gold Fields assets. Gold Fields currently disguises its lack of efficiency and the high cost of its underground mining operations through the contribution of its lower cost international portfolio and surface mines. Gold Fields also reports Rand/kg, rather than Rand/ton, which is a truer metric of mining efficiency. For the year ended 30 June 2004, Gold Fields' underground South Africa operations cost R546/ton, compared to R413/ton at Harmony. "Gold Fields appears to have misled its shareholders for a long time," said Bernard.

2. Superior allocation of capital

For the last five years, Gold Fields has spent approximately R4.8 billion (USD$785 million) on capital expenditure in South Africa with little visible benefit to shareholders. During that same time, Gold Fields' development, underground production levels, and viable reserve base have all declined, while the reverse is true for Harmony. Gold Fields' declining cash flow from operations puts its historic levels of capital expenditure at risk.

By contrast, over the last few quarters, investment has been maintained at Harmony in order to re-tool the mines for the strong Rand environment. The vast majority of this restructuring is complete so that Harmony's operations are no longer absorbing cash. We will never apologise for investing in assets that show a convincing return for shareholders time after time, said Bernard.

3. Increased reserves

Harmony's cost cutting initiatives will enable it to mine previously unprofitable reserves by making currently below infrastructure projects, in the money. Harmony estimates that reducing pay limits by 15% should add 36% to Gold Fields reserves at a Rand gold price of R90 000/kg.

4. Retaining Gold Fields' international operations

While Gold Fields' South African production has fallen, its international asset portfolio has grown significantly and now accounts for the majority of the company's operating profit. These are the assets the management of Gold Fields is now contractually bound to give away at far below fair value to IAMGold, said Bernard. This unwise transaction dilutes the exposure Gold Fields' own shareholders will have to the growth from its offshore mining operations. Moreover, the recent elimination of exchange controls for new foreign investment by South African firms, as announced by the South African Minister of Finance, makes the need for this type of offshore vehicle unnecessary. Harmony has stated that it will protect and enhance this value, not give it away, or complicate exposure to the profits in a value-destroying holding company structure.

5. A premium to Gold Fields shareholders

Contrary to the questionable analysis produced by Gold Fields, and unlike the proposed IAMGold transaction, Gold fields' shareholders will receive a fair premium for their shares from Harmony.

The Harmony-Gold Fields merger will create the world's largest gold mining company by production value - a benchmark for the industry with superior liquidity, a single listing without a holding company discount, and a management team known for its ability to inject an empowering, business-savvy culture into its acquisitions, said Swanepoel. Clearly, the new Harmony would provide an investment vehicle with considerable more investor appeal than the two mid-cap gold producers that Gold Fields intends to create.

He continued: There is a clear fit between Harmony and Gold Fields and we have identified multiple opportunities to unlock sustainable value. We hope that all stakeholders agree with Gold Fields' largest shareholder, Norilsk, and the world-renowned Institutional Shareholder Services
