Statement Regarding NRG Announcement of Purchase of Reliant Retail Operation

CHICAGO (March 2, 2009) Exelon Corporation (NYSE: EXC) indicated today that it is evaluating the announcement by NRG that it will acquire the retail assets of Reliant Energy, Inc.

As we have previously stated, our proposed acquisition of NRG will create significant value for both NRG and Exelon shareholders. NRG hasn't provided enough information about its deal with Reliant to enable us to make an informed judgment about the impact of that deal on Exelon's pending offer to acquire NRG and the resultant impact on the value our deal creates for shareholders. Nonetheless, given the announcement that Reliant may become part of NRG and our support for retail energy markets, we will certainly evaluate how all the pieces fit together in our proposed transaction," said John Rowe, Exelon's chairman and chief executive officer.

Exelon supports competition in both wholesale and retail markets. We believe under the right circumstances that an Exelon-NRG-Reliant combination would be good for competition in Texas particularly because we bring a stronger balance sheet to the table as well as good for the NRG and Exelon shareholders," Rowe added.

Rowe emphasized the need for Exelon, as well as NRG, shareholders to understand whether the Reliant agreement is value-enhancing. Exelon has repeatedly invited NRG to engage in a mutual due diligence process to verify the value created from the combination of Exelon and NRG and identify additional value that might support further discussions about the price put forth by Exelon. To date, NRG's management and board have refused. NRG's announcement of a deal with Reliant and the recent legal action by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regarding one of NRG's Louisiana plants reinforces the need for due diligence," Rowe asserted. It simply underscores why we urge NRG shareholders to demonstrate their support for an Exelon-NRG deal," he added.
