Canadian Pacific Files for Assistance of Federal Conciliator in Negotiations with TCRC

Legacy Pension issues must be addressed in new contract

CALGARY AB February 17, 2012. Citing business imperatives as the reason to address the railway's legacy pension, Canadian Pacific (TSX:CP)(NYSE:CP) today requested the Federal Minister of Labour appoint a conciliator to assist in progressing discussions on a new labour agreement with the union which represents the company's Canadian train crew employees and rail traffic controllers.

The legacy pension costs significantly impact CP's operating ratio and our ability to further fund investments that will support growth opportunities for our customers, said Canadian Pacific President & CEO Fred Green. We've made changes to the management pension plan. The time to address this within our collective agreements is now.

These are difficult and complex issues for both parties. CP believes that expert, third-party support, with a focused time table, will offer the best opportunity to achieve a settlement.

CP is seeking to achieve changes to legacy pension and post-retirement benefits to make them industry-comparable. CP has contributed $1.9 billion of solvency deficit contributions to its pension plan over the past three years.

We have a number of proposed options for pension plan modifications, some of which align with the industry, all of which are fair to employees, and none of which have any impact on existing pensioners, added Green.

Among the range of proposed amendments, some of the options provide guaranteed pension payment that is a multiple of average Canadian industrial pension payment and is comparable to what this union has already agreed to for the majority of its members at another major Canadian railway.

The company noted that its existing contract with the union, which represents 4,800 engineers, conductors and rail traffic controllers, expired on December 31, 2011. CP has been in negotiations since early October 2011 with the union on a number of topics ranging from wages to work rule changes and pensions, all intended to further drive service, productivity, and efficiency. No unions, including this one, are in a legal strike position.

The average conciliation process can last between 80 and 90 days.
