Discovery of new oil accumulation in Campos Basin

Rio de Janeiro, November 25, 2011 – Petróleo Brasileiro S.A. – Petrobras informs that it has confirmed the presence of oil in well 4-VD-18-RJS (4-BRSA-994-RJS), located in Campos Basin, in the area known as Marlin Complex.

The well, commonly known as Tucura, lies between the production fields of Voador and Marlim, at a water depth of 523 meters. Located 98 km from the shore of Rio de Janeiro State, the well lies 3 km from Marlin's Field and 2.3 km from P-20 platform.

As an outcome from the Varredura Project, the discovery confirms the remaining oil potential in areas already considered as a mature stage of exploitation and production. The confirmation of such accumulation will contribute for the quickening of production in Marlin and Voador concessions.

The discovery was verified by means of oil samples in post-salt rocks in a reservoir located at a water depth of 2,694 meters.

Preliminary analyses indicate that the referred oil carries the same quality of the one found in the adjacent fields of Marlin and Voador with close to 20° API.

Petrobras will continue the activities and investments estimated in the Assessment Plan, including the drilling of a production horizontal well.
