ITEM 7 - MANAGEMENT'S DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS OF FINANCIAL CONDITION AND RESULTS OF OPERATIONS

(a) Full fiscal year:

The Registrant is an exploration stage mining company and does not at present have any operating income. The Registrant does not anticipate any material changes in its financial position in the immediate future.

(1) Liquidity:

As the Registrant has limited operations, the only funds required at this time are for corporate administrative costs. The annual net cash needs of the Registrant are approximately $3,000. These funds can be made available in the future by the Registrant issuing stock on a private-placement basis or borrowing from the officers and directors after present cash resources are depleted.

(2) Capital Resources:

At the present time the Registrant does not have any commitments for capital expenditures. Any capital expenditures would be very small, and would probably be financed by loans from the officers and directors.

(3) Results of Operations:

The patented claims are being maintained and the financial records are updated quarterly.

g. The Company capitalizes costs incurred to purchase mineral property and to purchase or lease mineral rights. Exploration and development costs associated with mineral properties and claims not yet in production are expensed as incurred.

h. Earnings per share are computed using the weighted average of shares outstanding.

i. Income tax provisions are calculated using an asset and liability method.

j. Long-lived assets are reviewed for impairment when circumstances indicate that their carrying value may not be recoverable. In assessing recoverability, estimates of future cash flows expected to result from the use of the asset and/or its disposition is used. If the sum of expected future cash flows (undiscounted and without interest charges) is less than the carrying amount of the asset, an impairment loss should be recognized based on the fair value of the asset.

k. The Financial Accounting Standards Board issued SFAS No. 133, "Accounting for Derivative Instruments and Hedging Activities," in June 1998 and SFAS No. 138, "Accounting for Derivative Instruments and Certain Hedging Activities", in June 2000. These standards establish accounting and reporting standards for derivative instruments, including certain derivative instruments embedded in other contracts, and for hedging activities. It requires that an entity recognize all derivatives as either assets or liabilities on the balance sheet and measure those instruments at fair value, at the appropriate date. At March 31, 2000, 2001, and 2002, the Company has not engaged in any transactions that would be considered derivative instruments or hedging activities.

l. As of March 31, 2002, the Company has a recorded cost of $53,808 in exploratory stage mining properties which represents 83.85% of total assets. The ultimate realization of the Company's carrying costs in these assets is dependent upon the discovery and the ability of the Company to finance successful exploration and development of commercial ore deposits, if any, in the mining properties in sufficient quantity for the Company to recover its recorded cost or to sell such assets for greater than their recorded values. The likelihood of such discovery and development of ore in the exploratory mining properties, or sale thereof at March 31, 2002 cannot presently be determined. Therefore the recoverability of the recorded amounts of mining properties is uncertain. No provision for any ultimate decline in the realizable value of these assets has been made in the financial statements.

NOTE 3 - MINING PROPERTY AND AGREEMENTS

The Company's mining property consists of four patented mining claims which were acquired by the issuance of 1,100,000 shares of common capital stock. Prior to 1946, the Company performed a limited amount of exploration work on its claims over a number of years. An agreement was entered into on October 16, 1946 between Polaris Mining Company (now Hecla Mining Company) and Chester Mining Company providing for exploration and development work on a unitized area consisting of the four Mineral Mountain claims plus specifically defined portions of six Chester and three Polaris claims. Polaris was to perform the exploration work which was to be paid by Mineral Mountain. If the venture was successful, ores mined from the Mineral Mountain Area were to be divided on a basis of one-third each after 2/3 of all exploratory costs advanced by the Company had been reimbursed from net smelter returns. The costs paid out by the Company were included in the capitalized exploratory costs previously shown on the balance sheet. All capitalized exploration costs were written off on March 31, 1994. Work under the 1946 agreement was completed in the year 1948 without discovery of commercial ore.

Another agreement on the "Mineral Mountain Area" was entered into on July 24, 1957. The 1957 agreement refers to termination of the 1946 agreement and that Polaris (Hecla Mining Company), Chester Mining Company and the Company each owned an undivided one third interest in any commercial ore, which may be found in the area. The 1957 agreement also provided that the Company would not be reimbursed for 2/3 of the exploration costs it had expended on the unitized property under the 1946 agreement.

The 1957 agreement further provided that Polaris (Hecla) was to perform exploratory work on the unitized area. Polaris (Hecla) reported that it had expended $102,067 under the 1957 agreement and that work was suspended in July 1958. The percentage interests set out in the 1957 agreement were Polaris, 50%, and the Company and Chester, 25% each. Hecla Mining Company deeded all their interest in the Mineral Mountain Area to Sunshine Mining Company on June 26, 1984.

Sunshine Mining Company discontinued all operations in the state of Idaho during the first quarter of 2002.

The deficit accumulated during the exploratory stage in the amount of $196,997 had been capitalized for income tax purposes to March 31, 1993. As no known ore bodies or productive vein systems had been discovered, these costs were written off for income tax purposes on March 31, 1994
