Depending on various factors, including, without limitation, the Issuer's financial position and investment strategy, the price levels of the Common Stock, conditions in the securities markets and general economic and industry conditions, Loeb may in the future take such actions with respect to its investment in the Issuer as it deems appropriate including, without limitation, seeking Board representation, making proposals to the Issuer concerning the capitalization and operations of the Issuer, purchasing additional Common Stock, selling some or all of its Common Stock, engaging in short selling of or any hedging or similar transaction with respect to the Common Stock or changing its intention partially or entirely with respect to any and all matters referred to in Item 4. Loeb's current position with respect to the Issuer is reflected in the following letter that was sent to the Issuer's Board of Directors.

Attention: Board of Directors of Spartan Stores Inc.

Loeb Partners Corporation and affiliates own approximately 5.13% of Spartan Stores Inc. It is our belief that Spartan is facing a fork in the road with respect to the strategic direction of the company; Spartan can capitalize immediately on the fact that it is a prime acquisition candidate, or it can attempt to grow by expanding its small retail store base. In our view, and for a number of reasons, Spartan should engage an investment banker to maximize shareholder value by selling the company. We have asked Craig Sturken, the CEO of Spartan, to present the board with our viewpoint. He promised only that he would do so without intimating what the response will be. We are hopeful that the response will be to activate the above-mentioned process, as any other choice will likely result in the squandering of Spartan's free cash flow generation.

From a strategic standpoint, Spartan has a state-of-the-art distribution facility in Michigan, which would be attractive to large players in the industry looking to expand their reach in the state. Based upon our conversations with industry executives, Spartan's distribution business, in our opinion, would garner strong interest in a sale process. Spartan's base of 75 stores is greatly reduced as a result of the companies' successful efforts to restructure by eliminating lagging supermarkets. Again, based both upon discussions with industry executives and an examination of the asset profiles of large distribution companies in roughly the same geographic region, it is our opinion that certain large integrated distribution companies would evince interest in the totality of Spartan's assets. After all, it is only logical that large regional players would want to dominate Michigan by buying a well-operated, financially strong, company such as Spartan. It is only logical that shareholders would receive a premium for this value.

Edgar Filing: SPARTAN STORES INC - Form SC 13D

From a financial value perspective, Spartan can provide upside to its shareholders as long as the free cash flow that the company is generating is not squandered in attempting a risky acquisition program. In fact, we think Spartan is undervalued right now. Under sound management, Spartan, by our estimation, will generate approximately $1.60 in free cash flow per share for the fiscal year 2005. While the free cash flow will most likely decline in fiscal year 2006 due to a slowdown in working capital cash generation, we nevertheless estimate $1.20 in free cash flow per share, implying a 13% yield on a current stock price of $9.30. Spartan's current stock price implies a 4.2 EV/EBITDA multiple using our 2006 EBITDA estimate of approximately $60 million and year-end net debt of $60 million. If one simply compares this multiple with the 5 to 6 times forward multiple of larger competitors such as Supervalu and Nash Finch, it is plain to see that Spartan is substantially undervalued, even adjusting for the greater size of the other players. The company has not indicated that it plans to pay a dividend or effect a self-tender, so we draw the conclusion that although the company continues to de-leverage, it has no plan to maximize shareholder value. Recent history is littered with examples of great difficulty in supermarket expansion. In fact, large distribution companies such as Nash Finch have only recently recovered from excessive expansion in the supermarket space; Nash Finch was forced to greatly reduce its retail store space in order to restructure in a profitable manner. Expanding in the supermarket space is a capital intensive proposition which can call for substantial renovation and maintenance capital expenditures. Witness the fact that approximately 65 to 70% of Spartan's projected fiscal year 05 capital expenditure program comes from the retail business. Why play Russian roulette with the fruits of the companies' well-engineered restructuring program? Why use a relatively secure free cash flow stream to finance risky bets on expanding a small base of supermarkets and discount stores? We congratulate management on turning the company around, but we urge the board to understand that the Food Distribution Industry is consolidating and that irons must be struck when they are hot.

In speaking with industry executives, we understand that distribution and retail market assets are trading for approximately 5-7 and 6-8 multiples of EBITDA respectively. Applying a 6.5x multiple to our estimate for FY 2006 Distribution EBITDA and a paltry 4.5x to Retail EBITDA would produce a private market value of over $13 a share after subtracting our estimate of year end 2006 net debt. To arrive at anything near this satisfying per share value in a retail growth scenario, we needed to apply low discount rates to future cash flows, assuming that Spartan acquires $300,000,000 of supermarket revenue over the next three years at approximately 2% EBITDA margins. In our model, we gave this skilled management team credit with margin expansion in managing these acquired assets. While the details would require a longer letter than the one in front of you, we are ready to meet with the board and provide an explication of our math. Here is the bottom line: one must force the numbers in a discounted cash flow model to arrive at the same present value per share produced by a sale of the company to a strategic, or even financial partner. The restructuring is basically over, and the path we suggest is clear; a sale is a simple way to create substantial value for this company without suffering the vicissitudes of risky expansion in the face of the growing penetration of entities such as Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. which take care of their own distribution. Moving out of Michigan would entail great risk and might imperil our cash flow.

We are not in favor of contentious public battles with companies in which we have an ownership stake. We do not take public letters lightly. Further, we do not hesitate in again congratulating this management team in nursing this company back to health. We do, however, feel strongly that the company is in the fortunate position of a having one good and plausible option: a sale of the company to the highest bidder. We trust this board will perform its fiduciary duties with care and hire an advisor to immediately begin this process. The next phase is here. We are available to meet with the board and management at any time.
